Endorsement of the European Charter for Researchers and commitment to its implementation via the HR Excellence in Research Award process

Kristianstad University formally endorses the 20 principles of the European Charter for Researchers, and we are committed to implementing these principles within our institution through the HR Excellence in Research award process and to starting the procedure as well as undergoing all subsequent cycles of its implementation.

As an organisation dedicated to excellent research, we prioritise the well-being and career development of our researchers. We recognize the importance of creating a stimulating and supportive environment that fosters researchers' growth, mobility and success.

Kristianstad University is a young and growing university that seeks to advance internationalisation, collaboration and sustainability as part of its research development. By engaging with the HR Excellence in Research award process, we aim to embed the Charter's principles into our institutional policies and practices, ensuring a stimulating and supportive environment for our researchers. In doing so, we also strengthen our role as an attractive partner in the European Research Area.

Kind regards,

Håkan Pihl

Vice-Chancellor, Kristianstad University
